The Impact of
The Newark Museum of Art

ON FINDING A HOME IN ART

I am thrilled to present The Newark Museum of Art (NMOA) 2024 Impact Report, capturing the incredible work of thousands of people and organizations.

For generations, the NMOA has invited the public to experience the remarkable creativity of historic and emerging artists in ways that challenge our perspective and offer an opportunity for new relationships.

Our dedication to the conservation, curation, and exhibition of world class art in many forms has grown alongside our dedication to the lived experiences of our visitors, partners and neighbors. This powerful combination has had a profound impact on the museum field and on the lives of those who have participated, created, invested and engaged. Your enduring impact is reflected in these pages.

I am so grateful to have been a part of this incredible community, and I am even more grateful for the trust you have placed in us. The world needs ingenuity and compassion now more than ever, and together we can ensure that future generations experience the transformative power of The Newark Museum of Art.

Linda C. Harrison
DIRECTOR AND CEO

A woman with short dark hair and large gold hoop earrings is leaning against a wooden ladder in a library. She is wearing a voluminous, multi-layered orange tulle dress. The library has dark wood paneling on the walls and a wooden floor. To the right, there are wooden bookshelves filled with books. The lighting is warm and dramatic, highlighting the woman and the texture of her dress.

In February The Story of Newark Fashion: Atelier to Runway brought the glamour of Versailles to our galleries and celebrated Newark's own Stephen Burrows, the models who changed fashion forever, and black designers who are shaping today's runways.

NMOA was one of the first museums to exhibit living American artists decades before the Whitney Museum of American Art opened in 1930.

The Newark Museum of Art was the first museum artist Bony Ramirez visited when he moved to the United States from the Dominican Republic as a young teenager. In 2024 he returned with his first solo exhibition, Cattleia, exploring his Caribbean ancestry and narratives of colonialism and resistance. The exhibition was inspired by Martin Johnson Heade's painting Cattleia Orchid with Two Hummingbirds, among the first pieces of art at NMOA Ramirez connected with.

“I resonated with the painting because it was almost the only thing that I felt was very tropical and close to me. Looking back at it, it’s one thing that helped me come up with my own style because I really didn’t have that molding from somebody else or a teacher. I really had to look at it on my own.”

NOW, the soaring bronze sculpture by Pakistani artist Shahzia Sikander, was installed on the sidewalk at the Ballantine House. This addition to our permanent collection challenges passersby to consider women and the law from a global lens.

“It couldn’t be a better location for NOW and the South Asian diaspora’s significant presence in New Jersey and Newark makes this so much more meaningful. I haven’t had such a big gesture of support from an American institution towards acquisition of my work in many years (post 9/11) so there are many firsts here! I am deeply humbled and honored.” Shahzia Sikander

The Arts of Global Asia galleries, showcasing our world-renowned 30,000+ piece collection, were reinstalled to explore stories of myths, heroes, nature, and transcendence that connect people across cultures and continents. This is an important conversation between our curators and the public to test new exhibition strategies for a major reinstallation in 2027.

Building on its distinguished collection of Native American art, NMOA acquired three outstanding examples of contemporary Indigenous art. These new acquisitions are paired with traditional garments and accoutrements from the Museum's collection in Reimagining Regalia, a new long-term installation showcasing a younger generation of Native artists.

Each of the three featured artists—Wendy Red Star (Apsáalooke (Crow)), Erica Lord (Athabascan/Iñupiat) and Ursala Hudson (Tlingit)—create wearable contemporary artworks inspired by traditional regalia worn in their respective communities.

Every year artworks from NMOA's exceptional collection are sought by peer museums around the world. 2024 was no exception.

IDENTITY

In ancient Egypt, identity was not simply inborn, but built through family and professional relationships, dress and adornment, education and language, and piety. A person's name and social position were critical parts of their identity, often zealously repeated in word and image to prevent their stature from being lost.

Learning Together

As a graduate of Science High and The Newark Museum of Art's Explorer program, I was ready and equipped to forge my own path. Not only did the program instill a deep appreciation for museums and art (that I have now passed onto my 3-year-old Henry!), but it also provided me with skills, confidence and life-long friends and contacts. I became a nurse upon completing my B.A. from William Paterson University. In 2013, I received a J.D. from American University College of Law and now specialize in medical malpractice defense litigation. It is a fulfilling career that I love.

I will never forget the wonderful Museum staff cheering me on and helping me achieve my goals.

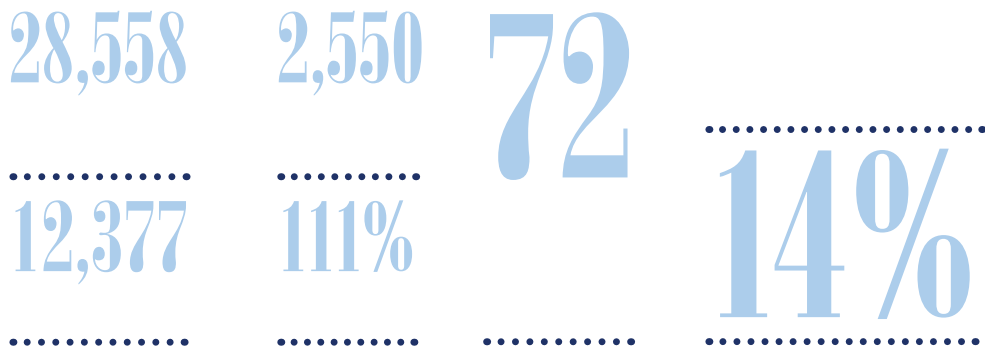

Forever thankful for The Newark Museum's Explorer program.

A Museum For All

Every visit to the Newark Museum of Art is good; last Thursday was exceptional. I participated in a members' tour of contemporary Native American art, brought to life by docents Nathalie and Gwynne presenting three artists—Jeffrey Gibson, Erica Lord and Wendy Red Star. In addition to exploring the beauty of rich colors and ancestral, traditional forms brought up-to-date, I learned that each artist takes action through art; they are artist-activists.

Gibson, whose 2016 sculpture, Come Alive! (I Feel Love) is the entry piece to Seeing America: Native Artists of North America, celebrates the freedom to be who he is and love who he loves. The 2024 Venice Biennale's entire U.S. pavilion was an exhibition of Gibson's art. Lord spotlights the need to improve healthcare for Native Americans—to end delayed diagnosis and early death. Red Star pays homage to the power and regality of women—ancestral and those here and now.

Beauty can be self-sufficient in good art, but beauty with purpose is even more powerful. I was uplifted, thinking: in this time of deep political uneasiness, we will make it as a country. And art and artists will be an important part of why we do.

What I feel when I'm at the Newark Museum of Art is this is where I need to be. This is a museum to cherish in the heart of a city on the move.

Above: Gilbert Sloan (far right) and fellow members of The Newark Museum Junior Science Club participating in a Nature Workshop exploring the chemical culture of plants. March 1942

The Junior Museum was founded in 1913 as one of the first museum after-school and weekend clubs for K-12 students.

In 1942 my father, Gilbert Sloan, was 14 and already a scientist. That's him on the right in the photo, exploring plant chemistry in the Newark Museum's Junior Museum program, which is the Explorers Program today. This program exposed him not only to science, but also to the vast and diverse resources that the Museum provided, such as fine art, decorative arts, music and culture.

My grandparents came to the United States with a fifth-grade education and little else. Victor, from what is now Belarus, and Goldie, from Poland, met and married in New York City and moved to Newark where they opened a corner store and raised four children.

Prior to running the store, Gilbert had worked many jobs, including one at a restaurant where he was paid only in leftover food that he took home for the family. It wasn't easy, but my father had the Museum.

At the Newark Museum my father discovered science, art, music and the magical ways they connect to one another. It opened worlds that he never knew existed. During World War II, Dr. Melville Peters, director of Titeflex Metal Hose, across the street from the family store, saw my father reading a physics book. Dr. Peters became a mentor, and introduced him to Michigan Tech, his alma mater. Eventually my father earned a PhD from the University of Michigan and had a career as an organic chemist that spanned six decades. A man of voracious curiosity and knowledge, our family joked that he was the precursor to Google.

Our entire family owes an incredible debt to the Museum and especially its programs for young people for feeding the curiosity of a young mind. You opened doors not only for my father's life, but for the generations that have followed. My brother and I would not be where we are today if my father hadn't been part of the Junior Museum.

Gilbert died in 2023 at 94. His last scientific publication was in 2022! I want you to know how grateful I am to The Newark Museum of Art for the legacy that lives on in Gilbert's grandchildren today. Thank you for your enduring work to increase access to incredible possibilities.
